Chapter 1 by Chuckie Farmentas

Esperanza a tall seldom girl with poof gray hair was sitting in the back of a abandoned train car holding onto a lion leg. Not sure where it came from or why she has it but she did it was rather large around three feet in diameter it looked rather drained. But strange enough so did Esperanza but not because she needed the blood she wasnt like a vampire but some other cray bizarre creature you'd never think of. See she had a rather odd shaped body and had no pulse almost like a zombie but not quite she moved rather fast.

It's now around noon and Esperanza is on the run looking around for something she reaches a certain area and begins to dig for something. When she had finished there was something gray and bulky but it looked very compact she pulled it from the ground and climbed a tree to where no one could see her. She now grabs some key and begins to run again after hoping out of the tree but she goes to this giant junk yard that has been deserted for about probably three years its full of things. She walks up to a window and some how puts the key in it unlocking some kind of gate door or something she walks in ad disappears but not into thin air as you still see her shadow standing their.
